ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The advisability of communicating, during the preparation of this iconography, with other collectors, as well as with artists who executed portraits of Whistler, was proved by the considerable amount of additional material which was thus put at my disposal.

My grateful acknowledgments are due to Mr. Joseph Pennell for reading and annotating my manuscript, as well as for other courtesies. My frequent references, "Pennells' 'Life,'" are, of course, to Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's "Life of James McNeill Whistler" (London and Philadelphia, 1908, etc.).

To Mr. Charles L. Freer I am under a debt of gratitude for having gone over the first draft of my manuscript and for giving me full information regarding several items which are in his collection. I have also to thank Mr. Freer for permitting me to reproduce a chalk drawing of Whistler by himself, hitherto unpublished.

I wish also to thank Mr. Howard Mansfield and Mr. Edward G. Kennedy for their great kindness in reading and annotating my manuscript, as well as for lending me original drawings for reproduction. The dry-point and pencil sketch by Boldini, both hitherto unpublished, in Mr. Kennedy's possession, are of particular interest. I beg also to acknowledge the kindness of Mr. Elmer Adler and Mr. Don C. Seitz in adding numerous items to my catalogue.

To Mr. Pickford Waller I am especially indebted for his great kindness in sending me a long list of caricatures and other drawings that appeared in the ephemeral press of England. I only regret that as Mr. Waller not infrequently failed to note the source from which he obtained his drawings, as well as other necessary information, but a small portion of his notes were available. Mr. Waller has in addition sent me an interesting portrait for reproduction.

I wish to thank H. R. H. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyle, Sir Hugh Lane, Mr. William Merchant, Mr. John W. Alexander, Mr. Arthur Kay, Mr. Victor D. Brenner, Mr. Samuel P. Avery, Mr. John W. Simpson, Mr. Henry Reinhardt, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Jr., for giving me information upon certain points, or for lending me unpublished portraits or caricatures for reproduction.

A few of these notes, in very scrappy form, covering about thirty items, I published some thirteen years ago in the now defunct "Literary Collector." The majority of the notes on the self-portraits in oil (but not those on No. 2) were printed in "Art in America" for July, 1913.

INTRODUCTION
INTRODUCTION

WHISTLER was the author of numerous portraits of himself, although he was not as prolific in this respect as Rembrandt.¹ In the first division of this iconography eight such paintings are listed, as well as three drawings in chalk and five in pen and ink, eight in pencil, three etchings and two dry-points.

Properly enough, six of these eight canvases by the greatest artist America has produced are owned in the United States, which is not to be wondered at, America now being the principal magnet for important paintings, as well as other works of art. Another of the portraits, a study, is in Dublin; the remaining example is in London.

¹Dr. Bode has catalogued fifty-eight such paintings; the etched portraits are also very numerous.
Two of these six paintings owned in America are in the unrivalled Charles L. Freer collection (Detroit), which has been generously donated to the National Gallery of Art at Washington.¹ These are the early, but soundly modelled, "Portrait of Whistler with Hat" [1], a study of the artist’s head and shoulders, which the Pennells state “it is evident . . . was suggested by Rembrandt’s ‘Young Man’ in the Louvre,” and the half-length portrait painted about 1867 [3]. This latter painting, as is noted in the catalogue, Pennells’ “Life” does not regard as an authentic work of the artist. Mr. Freer, on the other hand, informs me he is absolutely certain that it was painted by Whistler.

The second portrait in the iconography is an early study, executed about 1860, ¹The collection is to remain in Mr. Freer’s possession until his death.

which only came to light last spring. It shows the artist, whose head and shoulders only are visible, smoking. Mr. H. R. Ickelheimer of New York is the present owner. M. Théodore Duret, who viewed this portrait in my company in Paris, June, 1913, told me that in his opinion the painting was unquestionably from Whistler’s brush. He put the date at about 1862. Mr. Joseph Pennell, to whom I showed a full-sized photograph of the portrait a month later, declined to express an opinion regarding its authenticity without seeing the original. He would place the date, judging by the artist’s appearance, three years earlier than M. Duret. I regard the painting as being in all probability a work of the master and have therefore catalogued it as such.

The fourth painting catalogued is the half-length portrait formerly owned by the late George McCulloch, an excellent example of Whistler's work in portraiture. It has quite recently come into the possession of Mr. Harry Glover Stevens of Detroit, Michigan, U.S.A.

There are two versions of the "Whistler in His Studio" [5, 6]. The first, and earlier, is in the Municipal Art Gallery, Dublin, while the other is owned by the Chicago Art Institute. The earlier version, in Dublin, is the subject of much difference of opinion. Pennells' "Life" states, as is noted in the iconography, that this painting was repudiated by the artist. Sir Hugh Lane, the Curator of the Municipal Art Gallery, Dublin, however, holds an entirely different opinion regarding this picture, and I have much pleasure in quoting from a letter he has written me covering his side of the controversy:¹

¹The remarks in brackets are mine.
"The picture we have in Dublin of Whistler in his studio is quite well known to various neighbours of mine here [Chelsea] in the artist's lifetime. I am told on the best authority that he was asked to sell this picture and that he refused, saying that he liked it as a sketch, and eventually painted Mr. Freshfield's picture [this painting is now owned by the Chicago Art Institute] from it. It was exhibited at the Whistler Memorial Exhibition in London with Mr. Freshfield's picture, and all the artists I know considered it to be much finer as a work of art than Mr. Freshfield's more important painting. It has also recently been exhibited at the Tate Gallery amongst many fine examples of the painter's work. It is much lower in tones and more broadly painted than Mr. Freshfield's picture, and the faces of the two female models are only sketched in.
"I understand that this picture with many others was seized for debt and sold by auction, and afterwards exhibited with other unfinished works, which caused a law-suit between Whistler and the firm of dealers who exhibited them."

The two remaining portraits in oil have been the cause of some confusion owing to the fact that they bear the same title, "Brown and Gold." One of these [7], a half-length, is owned by Mr. George W. Vanderbilt; the other [8], a full-length, is in the possession of Miss Birnie Philip. Of the former Léonce Bénédite writes: "In the warm penumbra of its harmony, 'brown and gold,' he breathes the inner contentment of the satisfied artist. One feels that it is painted in a state of happiness, following the return of approval, so unjustly withheld from him in England, and painted in the years after his marriage; we can call it the portrait of the true Whistler.” The latter painting, the full-length, before it was repainted, was shown at the 1900 Paris Exhibition; a clue to it is preserved in a pen and ink sketch made from it by Whistler and owned by Mr. Joseph Pennell. It was not photographed, nor was it engraved.

Two or three other portraits of Whistler by himself are owned by a lady residing in London. She does not wish, however, to have them catalogued or her name mentioned. They are in oil and unfinished.

is seen at the right of the canvas, seated at a table with several other people. Apparently it is intended to be the artist, but as the face is not even indicated, I have not seen how this figure could properly be catalogued as a "portrait," and mention of it in the iconography has therefore not been made. Mr. Pennell informs me that the features were removed when the picture was cleaned.

Coming to the etchings and dry-points, we find a difference of opinion regarding the identity of the artist seen sketching in the plate known as "The Title to the French Set." Thomas's catalogue of Whistler's etchings regards this figure as being Whistler, as does Wedmore's. Pennells' "Life" says, "There was an etched title with his portrait, for which

Ernest [Delannoy], putting on the big hat, sat.” Mansfield contends that the subject is Delannoy and not Whistler. The compiler, holding the opinion that it unquestionably is a portrait of Whistler, has catalogued it as such. There is a similar difference of opinion with regard to the identity of the figure seen sketching in the etching entitled “The Little Pool.”

These divergent views, being important, are quoted in the iconography proper. Following these items is a list of the remaining self-portraits, executed in dry-point, chalk, pen and ink and pencil.

Mr. Pickford Waller, it may be mentioned, has in his possession the slightest kind of a sketch by Whistler of himself, a full-length. Whistler executed it at the time Mr. Waller was making a caricature of him, as a suggestion to guide him. This little scribble—for it is nothing more—will be found reproduced in "Books and Book-Plates" (London), Vol. iv, No. 3 (1903-04). I have not deemed it of sufficient importance to include in the iconography.

Turning to the second division of the catalogue, which comprises portraits by various artists, we ascertain that Whistler was painted by Sir William Boxall, twice by Fantin Latour, Walter Greaves (on numerous occasions), Thomas R. Way, Boldini, Mortimer Menpes and William M. Chase.

The portrait by Sir William Boxall—the artist who threatened to resign from the Royal Academy in 1872 if Whistler's famous "Portrait of the Painter's Mother" was refused—was painted when Whistler was a boy of fourteen. The two by Fantin were both included in groups, the earlier example in the artist's superb and well-known "Hommage à Delacroix," the other in a painting exhibited in the Salon of 1865, entitled "Hommage à la Vérité—le Toast." The latter painting was subsequently destroyed by the artist, but not before the head of Whistler (as well as those of Vollin and Fantin) had been cut out—it is the one owned by the National Gallery of Art in Washington. These are excellent portraits of the artist and must have pleased Whistler; it is on record, however, that he was far from pleased with the portrait by Chase and the very striking one by Boldini.

It is difficult and most problematical to get at the truth of the matter with regard to the Walter Greaves portraits of Whistler, of which sixteen paintings and fourteen drawings have been listed. I have information from reliable sources that leads me to believe that some of these portraits—of which my notes, it would appear, cover but a small part—were executed after Whistler’s death for obscure dealers who were “booming” Greaves, a number being painted for the American market. On the other hand, Greaves painted numerous portraits from life, many of them possessing decided merits.

Many of the well-known artists of the day executed portraits of Whistler,—in a great variety of media,—including Edwin Edwards, Helleu, Boldini, Mortimer Menpes, George Du Maurier, Fantin Latour, Sir Edward J. Poynter, Maurice Greiffenhagen, Phil May, John W. Alexander, Thomas R. Way, Rajon and William Nicholson. Particularly clever and characteristic in pose are the two dry-points and the sketch in pencil by Boldini; amusing, but occasionally in questionable taste, is the long series of dry-points by Menpes. The sketch by Poynter which has been reproduced is of decided interest, as is the large charcoal drawing by Alexander. Remarkably clever also is the sketch by Phil May, a very expressive draughtsman, who made several other drawings of Whistler besides that noted; unfortunately their places of publication could not be located. The woodcut in colour by Nicholson is the equal of any of them: this design was considered by Whistler to be one of his best portraits. Excellent also is the charcoal drawing by Ernest Haskell.

Following mention of a bust of Whistler by Boehm, of a carved head by Louis B. Zinn and of a plaque by Brenner, there comes a long list of caricatures of the artist, including the work of "Spy," "Ape," Linley Sambourne, Bernard Partridge, Charles Keene, Aubrey Beardsley, Max Beerbohm and Walter Crane. The most important of these caricatures is the dry-point by "Ape," which in reality is an excellent portrait, and one strong in characterization. Brilliant in conception and execution is Keene's drawing of Whistler as Mr. Punch, delivering his lecture on art; this drawing ranks high among contemporary caricature. Disappointing, however, is the design by Beardsley, one of the world's greatest masters of black and white, and neither is the sketch by the inimitable "Max," wittiest of caricaturists, quite up to what we might have expected. One or two other caricatures by "Max" could not be traced.

A list of photographic portraits completes the catalogue, of which the three by Dornac of Paris are by far the most interesting, being delightfully intimate views of the artist in his studio.

SELF-PORTRAITS

a. Paintings

1. PORTRAIT OF WHISTLER WITH HAT

This painting was etched by H. Guérard (etched surface, 8½ in. × 7¼ in.; plate mark, 12⅕ in. × 8½ in.). It was engraved on wood by Frederick Juengling for “Scribner’s Magazine” (New York), August, 1879 (5½ in. × 4½ in.).

2. WHISTLER SMOKING
Height, 10¼ in.; width, 7¼ in. Head and shoulders. Face, which is turned to left, is seen in three-quarters. A straw hat, about which is a grey ribbon, is perched upon the artist’s long, black, curly hair. The painter wears a black coat, and about his neck is a loose black scarf with white spots. In the right hand, which is just indicated, is a cigarette; smoke issues from his mouth. The background of the portrait is dark. The face is rather carefully modelled, the rest of the picture freely painted. Painted about 1860. Oil on wood. Signed "Whistler" (in red, lower right-hand corner). Reproduced in this book for the first time. Property of H. R. Ickelheimer, Esq., New York.

This picture was purchased in June, 1913, from Henry Reinhardt, picture-dealer of Paris. It had been bought by him a month before from Jacques Seligmann, picture-dealer of Paris, who had just purchased it from a French family. I am informed that the picture changed hands at least three times during the past twenty years. See Introduction to this iconography, pages 4 and 5.

3. PORTRAIT [attributed to Whistler]

Pennells' "Life" states that this portrait "is most probably not genuine," owing to the presence of the white lock of hair, which the artist did not possess when a young man. Mr. Freer does not hold this opinion; he is positive that it is genuine.
4. PORTRAIT
Height, 29½ in.; width, 21 in. Half-length. The artist, whose face is slightly turned to left, wears a grey painting jacket and a round hat; his right hand holds three paint-brushes. Oil on canvas. Signed with "butterfly" signature, both on painting (at left of canvas) and frame. Shown at London Memorial Exhibition [No. 30], 1905. Formerly owned by the late George McCulloch, Esq. Property of Harry Glover Stevens, Esq., Detroit, Michigan, U. S. A. Reproduced in Pennells' "Life." Also reproduced in this book.

This painting was etched by Percy Thomas (5½ in. × 3½ in.) for Ralph Thomas's catalogue of Whistler's etchings and dry-points (London, 1874). It was etched also by William Hole (10 in. × 7½ in.) for "Art Journal" (London), October, 1897.

5. WHISTLER IN HIS STUDIO [attributed to Whistler]
Height, 23½ in.; width, 18 in. Full-length. This is believed to be an earlier version of the following item [6]. The painting is similar in subject and composition, but lower in tone and more broadly painted. Oil on canvas. Not signed. Shown at London Memorial Exhibition [No. 15] and London Loan collection [No. 17], 1905, 1912. Property of Municipal Art Gallery, Dublin (Lane collection). Reproduced (in colour) in J. E. Phythlan's "Fifty Years of Modern Painting" (London, 1908). Also reproduced in this book.

Pennells' "Life" states that this painting was repudiated by Whistler. A contrary view is held by Sir Hugh Lane.
(see Introduction to this iconography, pages 4, 5 and 6). If genuine, as Sir Hugh Lane insists, this is the only case on record of Whistler repeating a picture.

6. WHISTLER IN HIS STUDIO
Height, 23 in.; width, 17¾ in. Full-length. The artist, who wears a white suit, is seen in full-length, standing at his easel, with brush in his left hand, the picture having been painted in front of a mirror. The interior also contains two female models, one standing, one seated on a sofa. Oil on canvas. Signed with "butterfly" signature (at right of canvas). Shown at London Memorial Exhibition [No. 13], 1905. Formerly owned by Douglas Freshfield, Esq. Property of Chicago Art Institute. Reproduced in Pennells' "Life." Also reproduced in this book.

In a letter to Fantin Latour, Whistler stated that this was a study for a large picture (which was never painted), to be similar to Fantin's "Hommage à Delacroix." In it he proposed including portraits of Fantin, Albert Moore, himself, the "White Girl" and la Japonaise. Vide Pennells' "Life."

7. BROWN AND GOLD
Height, 25½ in.; width, 18½ in. Half-length. The artist is seen with head turned to right; he is gesticulating with left hand. The white lock of hair and monocle are in evidence, as is the rosette of the Legion of Honour. Oil on canvas. Signed with "butterfly" signature (at right of canvas). Shown at Boston [No. 1] and Paris [No. 29] Memorial Exhibitions, 1904, 1905. Property of George W. Vanderbilt, Esq., New York. Reproduced in "Masters in Art’’ (Boston), December, 1907. Also reproduced in this book.

8. BROWN AND GOLD
Full-length. The artist wears a long brown overcoat. Shown at Paris Universal Exhibition of 1900 [American section, No. 108]. Oil on canvas. This portrait was subsequently repainted in part. Property of Miss Birnie Philip, London.

No photograph or engraving of this painting exists. See No. 29, a pen and ink study made from this portrait.

b. Etchings and Dry-points

Note: The following five plates are reproduced in Edward G. Kennedy’s “The Etched Work of Whistler” (New York: The Grolier Club, 1910).

9. PORTRAIT
[Wedmore 1] [Mansfield 9] [Kennedy 7] Height, 4\(\frac{5}{8}\) in.; width, 3\(\frac{1}{16}\) in. Quarter-length. An early portrait. Full-face, bending forward; the left hand holds a cigarette. Signed ‘‘J. W.’’ Etching.

A second state contains more shading in the background.

10. THE TITLE TO THE FRENCH SET
[Wedmore 20] [Mansfield 25] [Kennedy 25] Height, 4\(\frac{3}{8}\) in.; width, 5\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Full-length. The artist is seen sketching, surrounded by a group of ten children. Signed ‘‘J. Whistler.’’ Etching.

There is some question regarding the identity of the artist, certain critics holding he is not Whistler. See Introduction to this iconography, pages 8 and 9.

11. PORTRAIT

[Wedmore 52] [Mansfield 54] [Kennedy 54] Height, 9 in.; width, $5^{15}/_{16}$ in. Half-length. The artist, who is sketching, bends forward; on his head is a low-crowned hat with broad brim. Signed "Whistler, 1859." Dry-point.

A second state contains more shading in the hat.

12. THE LITTLE POOL

[Wedmore 72] [Mansfield 73] [Kennedy 74] Height, 4 in.; width, $4^{7}/_{8}$ in. Full-length. The artist is seen seated on a bulkhead above the Thames, sketching; barges are in the river below. Signed "Whistler, 1861." Etching.

Kennedy describes eight states of this plate, containing many important variations. Certain of them contain one other figure besides Whistler's, others two.

Wedmore speaks of the figure sketching as "an artist," while Mansfield and Kennedy state it is Percy Thomas. Pennells' "Life" says it is Whistler, whom it unquestionably resembles.

13. WHISTLER WITH THE WHITE LOCK

[Wedmore 142] [Mansfield 169] [Kennedy 172] Height, $4^{7}/_{8}$ in.; width, $3^{7}/_{8}$ in. Quarter-length. The artist's head and shoulders are lightly etched near the top of the plate; shading in the background. The white lock of hair is conspicuous. Unsigned. Dry-point.

24. PORTRAIT

25. PORTRAIT
Height, 6¾ in.; width, 5¼ in. Quarter-length. Full face; the artist wears a soft round hat. Property of National Gallery of Art, Washington (Charles L. Freer collection).
First reproduced in this book. Black and white chalk [on brown paper].

26. PORTRAIT
Height, 10 in.; width, 6¾ in. Half-length. The artist is seen leaning over a table, drawing. The head is slightly turned to right and the white lock of hair is visible. Formerly owned by Thomas Way, Esq. Property of National Gallery of Art, Washington (Charles L. Freer collection). Reproduced in Pennells' "Life." Black and white chalk.

27. PORTRAIT
Full-length. The artist is seen standing, with Mrs. Patterson and her little dog. A slight sketch done at his home in Tite Street, Chelsea, August, 1882. Reproduced in catalogue of Maggs Brothers, London (No. 295; October, 1912). Pen and ink and wash.

28. PORTRAIT

29. PORTRAIT
Height, 4 in.; width, 3¼ in. Half-length. The artist, whose head is slightly turned to the right, wears an overcoat. This is a carefully executed drawing made from the portrait entitled "Brown and Gold," shown at the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1900 (see No. 8). Signed with "butterfly" signature. Property of Joseph Pennell, Esq., London. Reproduced in Pennells' "Life." Pen and ink.

30. SIR WILLIAM BOXALL
Quarter-length. Portrait of Whistler as a boy (aet. 14). The head is turned to the left; he wears a wide white collar. Exhibited at Royal Academy in 1849. Property of Miss Birnie Philip, London. Reproduced in Pennells' "Life."

31. FANTIN LATOUR
Three-quarters length. Contained in the painting entitled "Hommage à Delacroix," shown at the Salon of 1864. Whistler is the fifth figure from the left; he is standing and wears a frock coat. Property of the Musée des Arts Décoratifs, Paris (Moreau-Nélaton collection). Reproduced in Théodore Duret's "Histoire de J. McN. Whistler et de son Œuvre" (Paris, 1904).

32. FANTIN LATOUR

Fantin exhibited a painting at the Salon of 1865 entitled "Hommage à la Vérité—le Toast," which he later destroyed;
the above head, however, together with those of Vollon and Fantin, were preserved. Vide Pennells’ “Life” (first edition, page 131).

53. EDWIN EDWARDS
Height, 4½ in.; width, 6½ in. The artist is seen sketching, seated at Moulsey lock. The title of the plate is “Whistler at Moulsey.” Etching.

54. PAUL HELLEU
Height, 13½ in.; width, 10½ in. Half-length. Seated, resting head on hand; full-face. Reproduced in “Revue de L’Art” (Paris), 10 December, 1903; heliograph measuring 8½ in. × 6½ in. Dry-point.

55. GIOVANNI BOLDINI
Height, 7½ in.; width, 12 in. Half-length. The plate, which was made at the time Boldini was painting Whistler’s portrait (1897), between poses, shows the artist asleep upon a sofa. Dry-point [on zinc].

Signed by Boldini in pencil.
56. GIOVANNI BOLDINI
Height, 11\(\frac{3}{4}\) in.; width, 8\(\frac{3}{4}\) in. Quarter-length. Drawn on a similar occasion as above item. First reproduced in this book. Dry-point [on zinc].

The only copy in existence is owned by Edward G. Kennedy, Esq., New York. Like the above portrait, this is also signed in pencil by Boldini.

80. GEORGE DU MAURIER

81. GEORGE DU MAURIER

82. GEORGE DU MAURIER
83-85. GEORGE DU MAURIER
Drawing of Whistler (Joe Sibley) as a Paris art student. Reproduced in Du Maurier’s “Trilby,” as originally published in “Harper’s Magazine” (New York), March, 1894. This drawing, at Whistler’s instigation, was suppressed when the novel was issued in book form. His portrait, however, appears in two of the illustrations, viz. “Taffy à L’Echelle” and “All as It Used to Be.”

86. FANTIN LATOUR
Head. Profile, to left. Reproduced in “Gazette des Beaux-Arts” (Paris), 1 May, 1905.

87, 88. SIR EDWARD J. POYNTER

89. ARTIST UNKNOWN
Head. Reproduced in “Figaro” (Paris), 28 February, 1885.

90. MAURICE GREIFFENHAGEN
Height, 6¾ in.; width, 8½ in. Full-length portrait of Whistler, engaged in conversation with a group of men. Reproduced in “Judy” (London), 16 March, 1887.

91. S. STARR [not signed]
Quarter-length. Head turned to left. Dated 1890. Executed for “The Whirlwind” (London), in which Whistler was interested, but not used. Property of Pickford Waller, Esq., London. First reproduced in this book.

Mr. Waller is of the opinion that Whistler worked on this drawing; the "butterfly," anyway, appears to have been affixed by him.

92, 93. ARTIST UNKNOWN
Two sketches. Reproduced in "Daily Graphic" (London), 6 April, 1897.

94. "A. C. G."
Reproduced in "Westminster Budget" (London), April, 1897.

95. CZAJKOWSKI

96. ARTIST UNKNOWN

97. ARTIST UNKNOWN

98. R. LILLIE
99. PHIL MAY
Full-length portrait of Whistler, engaged in conversation with Oscar Wilde. Reproduced in "Phil May’s Sketch Book" (London, 1903).

108. SIR EDWARD J. POYNTER

Drawn from life in a Paris café, 27 September, 1856.

109. SIR EDWARD J. POYNTER

110. JOHN W. ALEXANDER

Drawn from life in 1886. Besides being signed and dated by Alexander, this drawing was autographed on the margin by Whistler.
111. FANTIN LATOUR [attributed to]

This study, which is more than tinged with caricature, it is believed was presented to Whistler by the artist. The faulty draughtsmanship makes one hesitate to attribute it positively to Fantin. The pose is similar to the artist’s portrait of Whistler in his “Hommage à Delacroix” (see No. 31).

112. THOMAS R. WAY
Height, 8 in.; width, 5½ in. Quarter-length. Facing to right, showing the white lock of hair. Lithograph.

113. THOMAS R. WAY
Height, 5½ in.; width, 3¾ in. Almost identical with above item, but signed “T. R. Way” under butterfly. Lithograph.

A copy of this version is in the British Museum, London.

114. THOMAS R. WAY

115. PAUL RAJON
Quarter-length. The head, which is slightly turned to left, shows the white lock of hair and the monocle. Property of Wilfred Buckley, Esq., England. Reproduced as frontispiece to A. J. Eddy’s “Recollections and Impressions
No. 111

This drawing has been reproduced in photogravure (11¾ in. × 8¾ in.); the sheets of paper it was printed on vary in size.

116. WILLIAM NICHOLSON
Height, 9¾ in.; width, 8¾ in. Full-length. Standing. Woodcut.

Only a few proofs were printed from the original block; they were hand-coloured, numbered and signed by the artist. Reproduced by lithography, in colour, in "New Review" (London), Vol. 17. Afterwards included in the artist’s "Twelve Portraits,” 1st series (London, 1899). The lithographic reproduction contains an inscription, "James McNeill Whistler," which does not appear beneath the original woodcut.

117. WALTER GREAVES
Height, 10 in.; width, 7½ in. Full-length. Sold at auction (Anderson), New York, 5 March, 1912. Pen and ink, with brush work.

118. WALTER GREAVES
Height, 12 in.; width, 7 in. Full-length. Sold at auction (Anderson), New York, 5 March, 1912. Pen and ink, with brush work.

119-128. WALTER GREAVES
Sizes from 8½ in. × 6 in. to 11½ in. × 8½ in. Ten drawings. Half-length and three-quarters length. Sold at auction (Anderson), New York, 5 March, 1912. Pencil and pen and ink.
129. WALTER GREAVES

130. GIOVANNI BOLDINI

131. ARTIST UNKNOWN
Height, 3 in.; width, 2 in. Quarter-length. The artist wears a large hat. Published in “New York Sun” in early eighties. Woodcut.

132. FROM A PHOTOGRAPH

This drawing, which shows the artist’s back, was worked on by Whistler.

133. ERNEST HASKELL

This drawing was reproduced in platinotype (9¾ in. x 6 in.).
134. ERNEST HASKELL
Head. Reproduced in "Critic" (New York), September, 1903. Woodcut.

135. ERNEST HASKELL

136. JULES MAURICE GASPARD [not signed]

137-140. CYRUS CUNEO

These drawings were made from sketches executed when the artist was a student in Whistler's Academy.

141. ARTIST UNKNOWN
Height, 4½ in.; width, 5½ in. Quarter-length. There is a border, containing six of the artist's paintings. On cover of box for the "Whistler Cigar" (Leopold Powell and Company, Tampa, Florida). Chromo-lithograph.

BUSTS AND PLAQUES

142. SIR EDGAR BOEHM

143. LOUIS BRUNO ZINN
Head. Used as a decoration, together with another of Rembrandt's head, on façade of Frederick Keppel and Company's building, New York. Carving in stone.

Zinn was a pupil of Saint Gaudens.

144. VICTOR DAVID BRENNER
Height, 2½ in.; width, 3½ in. Three-quarters length. On the obverse is a peacock and the Whistler "butterfly." Plaque.

This plaque, which was cast in bronze, with a few in silver, was modelled to commemorate the London Memorial exhibition of Whistler's work. The edition was two hundred, half this number being struck at the Paris Mint and half at the Philadelphia Mint.
145. “SPY” [LESLIE WARD]
Height, 12¼ in.; width, 7¾ in. Entitled “A Symphony.” Published in “Vanity Fair” (London), 12 January, 1878. Lithograph, in colour.

The drawing for this cartoon is owned by the National Portrait Gallery, London. It measures 13¾ in. × 8¼ in.

146. “SPY”

This sketch, which is on the back of the above drawing for the caricature, is somewhat similar to the cartoon itself.

147. “SPY”

148. LINLEY SAMBOURNE
Figure in a drawing entitled “Whistler versus Ruskin.” Reproduced in “Punch” (London), 7 December, 1878. Pen and ink.

EXTRACTS FROM REVIEWS OF FIRST EDITION

Whistler collectors and amateurs of other modern masters will be anxious to possess a copy of the small limited edition of Mr. A. E. Gallatin's exquisite brochure. . . . Mr. Gallatin, need one say, has an uncommon talent for crisp comment, for catching the essential quality of a thing of art in a brief, sensitive phrase. It is remarkable to concentrate such a variety of skilled characterization of artists so diverse in so few—some fifty—pages. Mr. Richard Le Gallienne in The International.

Mr. Gallatin is always a welcome essayist, not only in his genial and enthusiastic style, but in his capacity for finding much interest in the byways and less frequented paths of artistic achievement. His is the pen appreciative that finds either a new and admirable phase to admire in the work of a much-known artist, or that discovers a less-known artist outright and allows us to share in the fruits of the discovery. His criticism is selective to a degree—even capacious at times—with the fortunate result that such gleanings in the field of art as he chooses to present to the public are always worthy of the public's most polite attention. . . . For short and distinctly illuminating essays on the discriminating appreciation of unsuspected flashes of genius these scattering notes make an enjoyable bit of reading. Mr. Charles Matlack Price in Arts and Decoration.

Again Mr. Gallatin has given us a little volume of short essays, intimate, delightfully written and charmingly presented. . . . The author has the rare gift of being able to say enough and not too much, of being brief without being fragmentary; his essays are sketches, deftly made, telling and individual. Miss Leila Mechlin in Art and Progress.

This little book is printed with all possible delicacy and fineness, and is a thoroughly tasteful example of typography. Its reproductions of pastels, water-colors, and chalk drawings by Whistler, and of a few pictures by Winslow Homer and others, are almost beyond praise in their execution. Mr. Gallatin's discussion of the relative values of these pictures and predominant qualities in the methods of the artists thus represented is sound and interesting. The Outlook.

In "Whistler's Pastels and Other Modern Profiles," the author, A. E. Gallatin, has produced another pleasant little volume of art essays, which join with those of his previous authorship in combining authority of statement, sympathy of understanding, and grace of presentation. Mr. Gallatin has won a unique niche for himself in the pantheon of art criticism, and it is always a pleasure to call attention (at too rare intervals) to his publications. Mr. Curtis Lublin in Town and Country.

Mr. Gallatin is a writer who has achieved the art of saying something pertinent in a short space, and saying it well. . . A crisp, piquant style. . . Illuminative and always happily expressed reviews. . . A copious series of well-executed plates, many from originals never before reproduced, add much to the charm of this attractive little volume. Connoisseur.
